Hospice Care

Within the healthcare system, Hospice care is the part of the continuum of care that focuses on end of life care, but choosing hospice doesn't always mean that a patient is near the end of their life. Hospice care can be provided to individuals with life-limiting illnesses when they are no longer seeking curative treatment. Hospice provides expert care and support for patients with a life-limiting condition and their families, wherever the patient resides. Hospice care teams work together to support the physical, social, emotional, and spiritual needs of the patient and family. Hospice professionals and staff are the experts who help families navigate the choices when someone is facing a life-limiting illness.

Palliative Care

Palliative care provides expert pain and symptom management for patients with an advanced illness who are under the care of specialists and continuing to seek curative care. Palliative care adds an extra layer of support to address and treat situations or conditions that cause symptoms to be out of control.

Physician Resources

We have developed processes on how to easily access care, allowing the Primary Care Physician to make the referral. We have also included a guide to aid the discussion for either Hospice or Palliative care. We are encouraging as much communication as possible between providers so end of life care can support physical health and physical health can support end of life care.
